

Home » interior design » Final Tabletop Inspiration from the Lenox Hill Gala

Final Tabletop Inspiration from the Lenox Hill Gala

Posted on April 26, 2015 by Stacey Bewkes

The Lenox Hill Neighborhood House Gala is always full of fabulous tabletop inspiration. Whether ideas for floral arrangements, textiles for tablecloths, mixing and matching dinnerware or fun table accoutrements, each year the designers come up with new inventive visions for entertaining with style. Christopher Spitzmiller, a longtime design chair for the gala, creates beautiful tables with a strong dose of whimsy. This year he featured his new bug and butterfly themed dinnerware and ginger jars. The tall blossoming centerpiece was topped with fluttering butterfly balloons.

With a curated collection of original art from D&E Lake, Philip Mitchell's "Temptation" table referenced not just the desire in the Garden of Eden but temptation of other varieties as well.

A magnificent centerpiece of red roses by Plaza Flowers rose from the table covered in Brunschwig's new Aravali floral with Railway Velvet on the chairs. I'm sure there was something delicious in those little red boxes!

Enter your email address to receive new updates

SUBSCRIBE

FOLLOW THE Q

Bringing you the best in lifestyle from interiors and fashion to art, architecture and more. With fresh original content and photos, Quintessence is a destination for those who want the story behind the style. Learn more about the blog and founder here.

MY VIDEO SERIES WITH SUSANNA SALK

MY STYLEMAKER VIDEOS

POSTS FROM LONDON

RECENT POSTS

▪ The Chic Table | Hermes Voyage en Ikat

- I thank you Domino | 24 Best Design Blogs of 2015
- Lenox Hill Neighborhood House Gala 2015

ARCHIVES

Select Month

Find us on Facebook

Quintessence

Like

18,690 people like Quintessence.

Facebook